be rattled off all day, but to put it has been nothing short of elite. Network's Cam Mellor ranked all backups and Pickett sat on top of attending up the individual numbers man, but team success goes a long way in getting the award winner. Pitt's loss to Michigan hurts his chances, but he takes care of business from here on in. I have as good of a chance to win ine a scenario where they don't win the division and earn a berth to the ACC Championship Game.

When the Panthers take the field the rest of the season, not only will they have the better offense but they will have the best player on the field in Pickett.

The most realistic path for Pickett to win the Heisman is for the Panthers to run the table, win the Coastal division and go on to win the ACC Championship. If that happens, the individual numbers and team success will both be there, making it hard to deny Pickett the award.

Pitt football has been a recurring cycle of mediocrity for decades now. If they finally reach the mountain top and break that cycle, then Pickett's case will be extremely strong.

It's important to remember the criteria of the award.

"The Heisman Memorial Trophy annually recognizes the outstanding college football player whose performance best exhibits the pursuit of excellence with integrity," the Heisman Award website reads.

Who better exhibits the pursuit of excellence than Pickett? He hadn't thrown for more than 13 touchdowns in any season of his collegiate career prior to this season and it took him just four games to eclipse that mark this season. The leap he has taken embodies the aforementioned quote.

For Pickett to make his name of "Kenny Heisman" a reality, he and the Panthers will need to handle business the rest of the way and have little to no room for error. ■
